Institute of Oriental Culture, University of Tokyo

The Institute of Oriental Culture, one of thirteen research institutes of the University of Tokyo, is a distinguished center of Asian Studies in Japan. The Institute is characterized by interdisciplinary studies. The research staff is presently composed of thirty-three specialists in various disciplines in the humanities and social sciences, such as history, literature, religious studies, art, archaeology, political science, law, economics, human geography and cultural anthropology.

Research emphasizes the analysis of documentary materials as well as field surveys and is conducted in close contact with scholars of related fields, including local scholars in different regions in Asia.

The Institute comprises the following four major departments: Pan Asia, East Asia, South Asia (including Southeast Asia), and West Asia (including Central Asia and Egypt).

The professors and associate professors holding appointments in the Institute form a permanent committee which handles Institute affairs, including the appointment of research staff. This committee is chaired by the Director. The Institute's faculty also teach postgraduate students in various departments of the University of Tokyo. In addition, the Institute staff includes a number of research associates, librarians and administrative personnel. Since 1966 the Documentation Center has been affiliated with the Institute and is run by experts to provide reference services relating both to Asian classics and modern publications.

CURRENT RESEARCH PROJECTS

In addition to individual research, research projects are regularly conducted. Each project, which involves one or more working groups, normally lasts several years and may involve occasional revisions and changes in subjects and participants. Working groups invite the participation of scholars in related fields from different faculties of the University of Tokyo as well as from other universities. A large number of scholars are thus affiliated with the Institute. The following projects are currently being carried out:

1. Comparative studies of minorities in Asian societies.
2. Methods and results of field surveys in Asian villages.
3. Comparative analysis of rural development in Asian countries.
4. National security environments in Asia and their domestic foundations.
5. The Asian Pacific region in the framework of global development.
6. Colonial rule and commercialization of agriculture.
7. Artifacts and social structure of Yin and Zhou dynasties.
8. Chinese thought and ritual institutions in the Six Dynasties, Sui and Tang periods.
9. Development of Buddhism in China.
10. State structure and bureaucracy in pre-modern East Asia.
11. Chinese drama and fiction in social and religious context.
12. Survey of public and private documents in China and Korea.
13. Location and classification of Chinese paintings kept in various institutions in Japan and abroad.
14. Chinese left-wing literature in the 1930s.
15. Social change and social consciousness in 19th-20th century Southern Asia.
16. Asia versus Europe: world-view in modern history.
17. Rituals and religious institutions in Asia.

LIBRARY

The Library of the Institute holds more than 360,000 volumes, including one of the best extant collections of Chinese source materials. Among the other important collections are: the Donghai-Zangshu-lou Collection (Chinese classics), the Ōki Collection (Chinese law), the Niida Collection (Chinese law), the Kiyono Collection (anthropology and archaeology), the Kuraishi Collection (Chinese language and literature), and the Nagasawa Collection (Chinese drama and novels).

Collections relating to other parts of Asia, including those in local languages, have also been recently augmented. The Library has long been one of the three major Japanese libraries for Oriental scholarship, and each year approximately 8,000 persons, including Orientalists from abroad, make use of its facilities.

THE DOCUMENTATION CENTER FOR ASIAN STUDIES

The main purpose of the Center is to provide various documentation services to scholars and librarians at home and abroad in the field of Asian Studies and thereby contribute to its further advancement. The Center publishes two or three volumes in the Asian Studies Documentation Series a year, which include Catalogues, Bibliographies, Indices, Critical Editions etc. covering China, Korea, Tibet and Vietnam. So far, 51 volumes have been published in this series (see list, pp. 11-14). These publications are distributed to 314 universities, colleges, and research institutions in Japan and 120 such institutions abroad.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE INSTITUTE

PERIODICALS

The Memoirs of The Institute of Oriental Culture (東洋文化研究所紀要)

Published three times a year. Each volume is a collection of academic essays by the research staff of the Institute and its affiliated members. The first volume was published in 1943, and 94 volumes had been published by March, 1984.

Oriental Culture (東洋文化)

Edited by the research staff of the Institute, with contributions invited from researchers on Asian studies, Oriental Culture began as a quarterly journal, but is now published annually as a single volume devoted to a specific subject. The predecessor was called The Oriental Culture Review and ran from vol. 1 (1944) to vol. 11 (1949). The new series was initiated with the present name and format in 1950 and has so far published 64 vols., the most recent appearing in March, 1984 (vol. 64).
